SMALL COMPANY TO ATTEND.

The ceremony, while it is to be notably elegant in all of its appointments, will be witnessed by the smallest company that ever attended so important a function in the White House.

The Vice President and Mrs. Marshall, the members of the cabinet and their wives, relatives of the President and Mrs. Wilson and of Secretary McAdoo, and a few intimate personal friends of the bride and bridegroom comprise the list of guests.

place in the historic blue room. The floral decorations of the room—in fact, of the entire mansion on the first floor—will be marvelously beautiful. Siender vases, of graceful designs in cut glass and rare porcelain, will be filled with cut flowers, including masses of lilles and flowers, including masses of lilles and white orchids, products of the White thouse conservatories. The south side will be banked with palms, to form a background for great bunches of spring blossoms of cherry, peach and apple. In the main lobby of the mansion the Marine Band orchestra of fifty pieces, under the direction of Lieut. William H. Santlemann, will render a program of music specially selected by Miss Wilson.

Later in the evening Secretary McAdoo and his bride will leave Washington for a brief honeymoon trip. It is not ex-pected they will remain long away from Washington, as it is known that the Secretary's official duties, particularly with reference to the federal reserve board, will demand his presence in the National Capital.

More than a century of romantic White House history will form a fitting halo for the bridad couple in the ceremony of today. According to accepted authorities, Miss Eleanor Wilson will be the fourteenth bride to plight her troth within the historic walls of the famous mansion. In the identical room where she today will take the husband of her to go out with his daughter. When he began the past winter the five to plight her took go out with his daughter. Miss Jessie Wilson, was united in marriage, in the magnificent east room of the White House, to Francis B. Sayre.

The White House is hallowed in the memory of one other May bride, beloved Nellie Grant, who, forty years ago, was married in the east room to Algernon C. F. Sartoris, an Englishman. Today's wedding will be unique in respect of the principals, as Miss Wilson will be the first daughter of a President of the United States to be joined in marriage to a member of the cabinet.

Miss Wilson's gowns of the past season have been especially well selected. One of her most becoming ball gowns was a white satin, both skirt and waist draped, the distinctive feature being the broad girdle of black velvet ribbon with long sash ends. Simplicity still rules the gowning of Mrs. Wilson and her daughters for the street and home wearing. One of Miss Eleanor's favorite hats this spring has been a shining black sailor faced with rose pink, with a full-blown rose and a bit of foliage perched on the left front of the brim.

in the Famous Blue Room

The blue room, the scene of the may riage ceremony today, is the official reception room of the White House. Its position in the center of the south front, its graceful oval shape and its delicate coloring have always been greatly admired. Its appearance now is the same as when the redecorations and changes were made in the entire house in 1904 for the Roosevelt occupancy. It was at that time that the door at the southeast corner was put in to connect the room with the green parlor adjoining.

The wall covering is blue brocaded satin, and the furniture has backs and cushions upholstered in blue. The later treatment greatly simplified the appearance of the room from that it had received in the general overhauling of the riage ceremony today, is the official re-

Before President Arthur took up his residence in the White House it was freshened up in many ways, and especially so on the main floor. Robin's egg blue silk was put on the blue room walls, the furniture was recovered in the same shade and heavy blue silk curtains at the windows gave further token of the designation. The ceiling was most ornate, with a design in silver radiating from the central chandelier. The appearance of the apartment was much admired during that period.

The White House has generally been found to be large enough for the uses of the immediate families of the Presidents. It was somewhat taxed during the Harrison term, when the family circle often included a son and daughter and their families. Additions to the second-floor room space were secured after the presidential office building was erected at the west of the house. The foundations of the old greenhouse were used and remodeled into laundry and other service rooms, also in 1964. It was then, too, that the east approach to the building was built which gave a commodious entrance, lobby and cloakrooms in an extension from by and cloakrooms in an extension from of lace and fine muslin, and as the par Last summer further accommodation for guests and servants was provided in the utilization of several of the garret rooms, the Secretary of the Interior in that facing south. few days ago, the making of their dainty robes was accomplished in the same period.
